Jeremiah O'Leary, following President Reagan in Santa Barbara, reports these court appointments: The president nominated Herbert M. Rutherford III of Washington, D.C., to be U.S. marshal for the District of Columbia succeeding James O. Golden. He has been the court-appointed marshal for the District since January. The president also resubmitted to the Senate the name of Stanley Sporkin to be a U.S. district judge in the District's federal court. Mr. Sporkin, former counsel at the CIA, was not confirmed in the previous session of Congress.
